PLAYGROUND MAGAZINE
CALL FOR ARTICLE SUBMISSIONS
SPRING - SUMMER 2021

Purpose

Playground professional publication produced by the Canadian Association for Play Therapy is to publish and disseminate clinical and professional articles, critical reviews, and other news and information to member mental health professionals and the general public. Our magazine is published twice a year.

Critical reviews of play therapy books and audio/video programs are included not to market a particular product but to help play therapists select those materials that increase their play therapy knowledge or practice.

Style

Only articles crafted in APA style are considered. Ensure that your article complies with the format described in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association, 6th Edition. Carefully review and edit your article before submission. It is further reviewed and perhaps edited for clarity, stylistic, or spatial purposes without altering intent by the Clinical Editor. The decision of the latter is final.

References

An appropriate number of references should be included to support material presented in the article. Authors are encouraged to consider quality over quantity. The majority of references should be dated within the past seven years.

Copyright

By submitting an article, you agree that, if accepted, the copyright for it is immediately assigned to the publisher, CAPT, which thereafter enjoys the exclusive rights to reproduce and distribute it and strictly prohibit its reproduction, storage, or transmission in any form or by any means without its expressed permission in writing.

Deadline for Submissions

January 15, 2021

SPRING-SUMMER 2021 PLAYGROUND THEME

The Spring-Summer Issue of Playground Magazine will highlight those articles that demonstrate the use of TelePlay and experiences in the therapeutic practices of Play Therapy On-line.

We would like to hear more about your successes, challenges and solutions as you entered this new way of providing essential mental health services during COVID 19.
